

The kitchen is the “Nerve Center” of the home.

The kitchen is the “Nerve Center” of the home. For friends, family or a single's haven to experiment and discover the wonderful world of food. I raised all four of my children in the kitchen and to this day our holidays are filled with everyone fixing their favorite dishes.

Today, counter tops are not the old Formica with the metal trim. Now there is stone, a composite material that will never mar, and tile that can be combined with it all. The metal trim has been replaced by a wonderful brass rail that can double for a towel rack. Floating islands with different counter heights for eating and preparing the food are also “the 90's”.

I'm asked most often to rip out walls, space plan the pots and pans and what should go over the window so that fabric doesn't get wet by the sink.

Multimedia rooms are not only for the family room either!!! Kitchens today have security systems, answering machines, music, for eating and for getting the latest information from the family.
